

Francine Hughes

Senior Director, Operations & Administration

Francine Hughes leads operations and manages the administrative teams across McCourt LP, its offices, and properties.

Francine is responsible for all aspects of facility management and administrative support at each of the firm's offices, including strategic planning, financial oversight, and vendor and owner relations. Additionally, she plays a critical role in the management of several of the firm's investment properties, particularly during the early stages of development.

Before joining McCourt in 2013, Francine served as vice president, stadium operations, for the Los Angeles Dodgers. In that role, she managed the 330-acre Dodger Stadium, was involved in every aspect of the fan experience, and was responsible for a staff of more than 600 game day employees. She also served as the Dodgers' operational liaison to their Spring Training facility at Camelback Ranch in Glendale, AZ, and their academy at Campo Las Palmas in the Dominican Republic. During her tenure with the Dodgers, Francine was instrumental in spearheading sustainability initiatives at Dodger Stadium, including energy and water conservation programs and more robust recycling efforts throughout the property.

Prior to joining the Dodgers in 2009, Francine spent nearly 15 years in commercial real estate, and served as a regional vice president for Winthrop Management, a senior property manager at Maguire Properties, and in a variety of roles at Equity Office Properties. In those positions, she managed portfolios of up to 2.3 million square feet of commercial real estate assets.

Francine graduated from Pepperdine University with a bachelor's degree in Business Management.
